

Clone Bank for Breeding Materials

The forest tree breeding projects promotes selective breeding by selecting individuals as plus-trees which has genetically superior traits such as taller height, larger diameter at breast height, straight stem, pest-free, disease-free and developing genetically superior varieties.

FTBC is preserving genetic resources by planting clones of superior trees which are selected from various distribution in this preservation garden and preserve those superior clones to conduct forest tree breeding project efficiently.